Inspiration in Pakistan

During his recent trip to Pakistan, Chris Bombardier, our executive director, met with many beneficiaries of Save One Life programs.

Fozia kindly shared her story with Chris during his visit to Rawalpindi.

Fozia was a sponsorship beneficiary, who has type 3 Von Willebrand disease. She used her sponsorship funds to stay in school and earn a degree to become a teacher.

Chris and Fozia

Fozia started teaching while she was in school to earn some income. She created a teaching program in her home and now teaches three sessions per day, with 20-25 students in each session. Her students are excelling in school, and Fozia hopes to expand her school in the future to share her love of learning.

Save One Life commits to sending sponsorship funds to beneficiaries — even after they lose a sponsor.

Adventuring with Hemophilia: The PCT

Thursday, February 1 LIVE: 8:00 PM - 9:30 PM EST

Join us this Thursday, February 1 for our webinar, Adventuring with Hemophilia: The PCT, with William Addison and Chris Bombardier. Will and Chris will have an engaging conversation about their monumental hiking accomplishments, being an athlete with hemophilia, and raising awareness for people with bleeding disorders around the world.

William Addison is a young athlete with hemophilia. In 2020, he thru-hiked the 2,193-mile Appalachian Trail. This past summer he took on his newest adventure, thru-hiking the 2,650-mile Pacific Crest Trail. William was inspired to do these epic feats to raise awareness for the global healthcare disparity in the bleeding disorder community, and to actively make a difference through fundraising.

Chris Bombardier is the executive director of Save One Life and also the first person with hemophilia to climb all of the seven summits.

Both of their inspiring backgrounds will make for an impactful conversation that we are looking forward to sharing. At the end of the talk, we will open up the conversation for you to ask Will and Chris your questions!

* If you are unable to attend live from 8:00 PM - 9:30 PM EST, we will have a recording available afterwards—be sure to include any questions for Will and Chris in your registration.
