

The Snow Goose

The snow goose is a white bodied goose, with black wingtips, and a pinkish bill. Snow geese travel in large groups of a couple dozen and can be a part of flocks of hundreds of thousands. They can be seen in California's Central Valley while they winter in the Pacific Flyway.

During the winter geese migrate from cold areas in the north to warmer areas in the south in search of food (wintering). In the Central Valley, snow geese enjoy eating the vegetation in marshes as well as the corn, rice, and pasture grasses in agricultural areas.

Paper Plate Snow Goose

Materials:

Paper Plate

Scissors

Crayons, Markers, or Paint

1. Take a paper plate and cut out a half circle a little above the center of the plate, leaving the rim of the plate attached.

2. Cut off about 2 inches of the plate's rim and shape the end into a rounded bill.

3. Using coloring materials to add the black wingtip and pinkish bill.
